FORD ASKS TAX CUT

Believes Reduction in Tax Best Incentive to Business

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—Senator Hattie W. Caraway declared here Tuesday no action would be taken on the appointment of the third federal judge for Arkansas until after she and Senator John E. Miller confer in Washington in January.

Ford, On Taxation —(P)—Edsel Ford told the senate profit-sharing committee Tuesday that a reduction in federal taxation would be "as good an incentive" to business as anything the government could do.

Ford testified that he believed incentive taxation to encourage plant expansion, purchase equipment, and regularize employment, "might lead to consequences difficult to handle."

It appeared in the accounts of the wild demonstration in Rome, where members in the Chamber of Deputies staged a frantic demand for the "return" of Tunisia and certain parts of the French Riviera to Italy on account of the demonstration the dispatch closed with these words: "The Chamber of Deputies, which is to be supplanted by a new house, met today to vote itself out of existence."

The significance of this event cannot be underestimated. Fascism is a new form of social organization in which the state makes an attempt to regulate and control the economic system.

Mussolini, in his early days as premier, began to tinker with this idea. He had been a socialist, but he had also been a syndicalist. When he abandoned socialism and became the great champion of saving capitalism in Italy, it was natural that he should turn to the syndicalist pattern. And this is what he did.

Italian NRA If as a dictator, of course, was to be supreme. But there must be bodies which could make the rules and regulations for business, rules to govern production, to regulate prices, to regulate what he called "fair trade practices," rules governing competition in all its forms.

If therefore he decided that the proper way to do this was to turn it over to the trades organized as such—to trade associations and to organizations of workers. He set up something like the structure we established under the NRA. He called them corporatives. We called them codes of practice. The code authorities, the corporatives made the rules in the first place. They had to be approved by the representatives of the government finally.

So immediately Italy had two governing groups functioning under the dictator. One was the Chamber of Deputies elected by geographical districts which made the laws governing the political state. The other was the corporatives which made the rules and regulations for the economic state.

But the inevitable happened. The political Chamber of Deputies and the corporatives soon clashed. The chamber still retained a semblance of the democratic technique. It was elected by the people. But the corporatives were far from democratic. They were elected by the employers, a small group of people. Little by little the chamber grew weaker and corporatives became stronger. Until finally the Fascist leaders began to demand the extinction of the last vestige of the democratic society in Italy—the Chamber of Deputies.

Dictator's Technique This agitation had reached this point in 1933 just as we began to experiment with the same dangerous instrument. We did it, of course, without realizing what we were doing. Our experiment broke up because we had no dictator, by harsh and ruthless measures, to compel compliance, and because our democratic chamber (Congress), though it had grown weaker through what might be called its "business," was still strong enough to attack the NRA and because the Supreme Court unanimously said it was unconstitutional.

But in Italy the dictator decided to abolish the chamber and to make the corporatives supreme. Later a new constitution was adopted abolishing the national congress of Italy and providing a new chamber which would represent the trade associations—the corporatives. This week that Chamber of Deputies, ready for the last time to pronounce its death, was to do that, melancholy event the dispatch quoted referred.

Man Surrenders in Hit-and-Run Case

J. H. Latimer Says He May Have Been Driver of Death Car

TEXARKANA—J. H. Latimer, federal collector of internal revenue here, surrendered to Sheriff Tom Sewell Monday and admitted that he might have been the hit-and-run driver who Sunday night struck and instantly killed Mrs. H. E. Thompson, 70-year-old-hitchhiker, as she walked along the Texarkana-Little Rock highway, 15 miles north of Texarkana.

Latimer said he was on route to Prescott early Sunday night and when midway between Texarkana and Fulton, he dimmed his lights at the approach of another car. He said that his lights went out entirely and that while they were out he felt his car strike something. At Hope he said he stopped to examine his automobile and found that the right fender and door were dented.

Donald Boyer, 20, who was hitchhiking with Mrs. Thompson, said the car which struck her and failed to stop, flashed its lights as though to dim them, but they went out entirely and then the car struck the aged woman.

After taking a written statement from Latimer, Sheriff Sewell released him on his own recognizance and said investigation would await the return to Texarkana of Prosecuting Attorney Ned Stewart.

Efforts are being continued to locate relatives of Mrs. Thompson.

Sheltering Trees to Soften Ravages of Wind Erosion on the Great U. S. Plains

'Shelter' Belt Is Bringing Hope to Dust Bowl Lands

Within Four Years of First Tree-Planting, Results Are Seen

DAKOTA, OKLAHOMA

Farmers Co-operate in Vast Federal Project in the West

By NEA Service Uncle Sam's shelterbelt trees root in the prairie soil across 6000 miles of the great plains, sturdy hope of a new prosperity in western farming.

Less than four years after the government planted the first tree, an Austrian pine, on the farm of H. E. Curtis near Mangum, Okla., much of the gigantic project has already exerted marked influence on adjacent land. Crops grow where formerly it was impossible and shelterbelt plantings themselves have attained 92 per cent survival in some parts.

From the Dakotas to Texas long rows of ash, elm, locust and many other varieties shed for another winter. They cover 6358 miles in six states, serve almost 14,000 farms. Nearly 85,000,000 trees cover 106,000 acres.

This main-made windbreak is not, of course, a cure-all for the ills of agriculture. But tree planting is essential in the stabilization of prairie-plains farming, protecting crops, soil, stock, game. Wind erosion is one of the most destructive forces in the plains, and shelterbelts, properly located, will check and control this movement of soil, federal forestry experts contend.

The Case of Casey Take the case of Ed Casey who farms near Mitchell, S. D. Early in 1935 dust and wind had just about licked Casey. Seriously he considered abandoning his farm and moving to the Pacific northwest. Then came the shelterbelt project. Casey agreed to co-operate in the work as a last resort.

The planting began on his farm in April, 1935, while the wind still whipped black soil wholesale from his land and sent it whirling into some other state. Workmen found fences completely buried by drifting topsoil. But somehow they anchored the tree roots.

The story shifts now to 1937 when assistant chief, L. W. Tinker of the Forest Service, visited the Casey farm. Mr. Casey had decided to stick. Where two years earlier the topsoil covered his fences he now exhibited a fine crop of watermelon. A cottonwood tree planted in 1935 was slightly more than 20 feet tall. Birds had come back to build nests and even pheasants were taking refuge in the new growth.

Said Mr. Casey: "South Dakota sure looks good to me again."

The government by no means found co-operation in every locality such as Mr. Casey offered. Countless farmers considered the project impractical and still do.

In June, 1936, a check was made to determine the percentage of survival. It was found that of the trees planted in 1935, 77.3 per cent were growing while of the trees planted in 1936, 82.4 per cent were growing. The summer of 1936 brought the worst drought in the plains' history. A check in September, however, showed that 51.2 per cent of the trees were still alive. In 1937 and 1938 as high as 92 per cent survived.

Late Start "If the tree-planting program now being instituted had been accomplished 50 years ago, or even 25," forestry officials concluded in a recent report on the shelterbelt, "untold millions of dollars worth of permanent damage to the soil would have been avoided, thousands of farm families would be prosperous instead of destitute, the nation would be in a much better situation in regard to future food supplies, and human health over half the

Federal Debt to Take All, Is Fear

"Payday" Would Require Entire Revenue of State of Virginia

ROANOKE, Va.—(P)—Senator Harry Byrd, (Dem., Va.) predicted Monday night the American people would meet "a rude awakening" when they came to pay the national debt.

That debt, he told the Virginia Highway Users association, has been trebled in the past five years by the federal government's "stupendous program of public spending" and will "soon be over $48,000,000,000," and he added, the interest "will in all probability amount to more than the principal."

He said that Virginia's "self-denial and economical administration" in state government would not protect it from payment of "our proportionate share." Instead, he asserted, "If Virginia dedicated every dollar of revenue now derived from estate taxation, including the gasoline tax, and ceased to take care of the roads, schools, health, and other state activities, our total state tax revenue would be consumed for over 40 years to pay our minimum share of the federal debt and interest thereon."

Hot Springs Chief Detectives Tipped Off Gang, Is Story

Akers Was Paid Protection Money, Says Lamb Gang Member

STORY TOLD COURT

Sam Haynes One of 22 Witnesses Put on Stand by Government

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The story of a tentative plot by Lamb-Norris gangsters to kidnap Leo P. McLaughlin, mayor of Hot Springs and powerful political leader, in the summer of 1937, was given Tuesday to a federal district court jury in the harboring conspiracy trial of Herbert (Dutch) Akers, former Hot Springs chief of detectives, FBI Agent John L. Madala related the story in closing testimony for the government, which he said Akers admitted to him and other agents.

The agent said Akers admitted he associated with the gang during their 1936-37 stay in Hot Springs.

Police Gave Tip-Off

LITTLE ROCK.—A member of the once notorious Akers (Sonny) Lamb gang testified in United States District Court Monday that Herbert (Dutch) Akers, former Hot Springs chief of detectives, served as "finger man" for several proposed robberies in Hot Springs during the time Akers was purported to have harbored the gang between March 17 and August 15, 1937.

Sam Stegal Haynes, 29, serving a five-to-12-year sentence in the Texas penitentiary at Huntsville for armed robbery, was one of 22 witnesses the government put on the stand in the opening day of Akers' trial on conspiracy to harbor Thomas Nathan Norris, member of the Lamb gang. Norris is serving terms totaling 436 years in the prison at Huntsville for murder and armed robberies.

Haynes said Akers had discussed with members of the Lamb gang robbery of several well-to-do gamblers visitors to the resort city and hold-up of the money car that carried daily receipts to and from the Oaklawn Jockey Club racing plant near the city. During an hour appearance on the witness stand, Haynes said he and other members of the gang made cash payments totaling about $500 to Akers in exchange for protection and information regarding activities of State, Police and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents.

He testified that various members of the Lamb gang—Goldie H. Hairston, Norris, Lamb and himself—would steal automobiles in Hot Springs, drive them until they were wrecked, then abandon them in a designated spot to be picked up by Akers.

First Dealings Recounted

Haynes told the court he and Norris first attempted to contact Akers in the fall of 1936 through a man they knew as "Farmer" Jefferson, a bartender, whom they met in Rodessa, La. Jefferson came to Hot Springs with them, he related, and arranged the meeting with Akers through William Dexter Sheffield, then operating a filling station on the Arkadelphia highway outside Hot Springs. Following the contact with Sheffield, he continued, they took Jefferson to Rodessa and returned to their base of operations in Texas.

About the middle of March, 1937, Haynes said, he and Norris came back to Hot Springs with Norris' wife, rent—

Two Orphans

One is 10. The other is 5. They are brothers, the sons of a prosperous wholesale grover, Fabian Greif of Vienna. For the next three years the boys will be orphans in the strange land of America.

Father and mother are in Vienna, where they must wait three years to gain a place on the Russian quota to the United States as both of them were born in Bukovina, formerly Austrian, then Rumanian and now considered a part of Russia. The boys were born in Vienna and so come under the German quota which permitted them to come to America at once.

The Nazi terror drove them from the arms of their parents to the comparative safety of America, where they will be safe but still deprived of their parents. It is not strange then that ships news reporters who met the boys at their boat steamed past the Statue of Liberty found an eloquent silence when they asked them about conditions in Vienna.

Thanks, Doc

That distinguished man of letters, Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale University, has some interesting things to say about being alive and vital in this dizzy old world of ours.

Newspapers are a test of alertness and if you can find something on every page of your newspaper that interests you, then you are enormously alive and vital, he told an audience of Chicago business and professional men.

There is one good editorial every day, he says, and this is high praise indeed from an authority of his standing in the world of literature. The world is infinitely worse than it was 30 years ago "but it is far more exciting," he says.

Failure, disaster, sin, loss, crime and destruction race through the columns of the first page of a newspaper "because they are the exception to the more generally prevalent virtue of honesty, decency and tranquility."

Victory is one of the sports page. "That is why clergymen and college professors always look at these pages first. Clergymen eat up stories about boxing because of the dominant note of triumph and victory," he added.

Infrequently is the silk hat of literature tipped in the direction of the Fourth Estate. Appreciative, the old fedora comes off, to return that greeting.

Grapefruit and Oranges

Organized retailers who met in Washington to draft a program for distribution and increased consumption of this year's bumper crop of oranges and grapefruit may have taken a most significant step in modern selling.

For the distributors proposed a plan where handling and distribution costs be reduced in that "such savings be applied toward lowering consumer prices and improvement of producer prices."

There were other important provisions such as the elimination of third grade fruit from shipments, the provision of a maximum mark-up of 25 percent, the reduction of transportation charges, and a permanent board to advertise and merchandise the product.

But the vital part of the program was the willingness of the growers to share their bumper crop, the bounty of nature, with the ultimate consumer, the housewife, by reducing prices.

Retailers of the country will do well to watch this effort on the part of one industry to move a bumper crop for the ultimate advantage of everyone along the line, producer to consumer.

Vitamin D to Be Studied Fully to Great Advantage of Health

Among the most important of the vitamins is vitamin D, the one which is responsible for the manner in which the body uses calcium and phosphorus. It is definitely related to the disease called rickets, but it is also concerned with inadequate development of the bones and teeth and with the proper functioning of the body as a whole. It has been exceedingly difficult for scientists to find out just how much human body an adequate amount but a little beyond that. I am not safe to play along the border of protection. The amount of vitamin D that the body requires is not the same in all cases and, indeed, not the same in every case from day to day. The amount of vitamin D required is definitely related to the amount of calcium that is available in the diet. According to Dr. P. C. Jeans and Genevieve Sterns, the vitamin D requirement goes down as the calcium supply goes up and vice versa. This mechanism cannot compensate for amount of calcium that is below the minimum that everyone requires for health.

Furthermore, it is difficult to calculate the amount of vitamin D required because the sunlight that we receive on our bare skins creates vitamin D and ultra-violet light received in any other way may also have this effect.

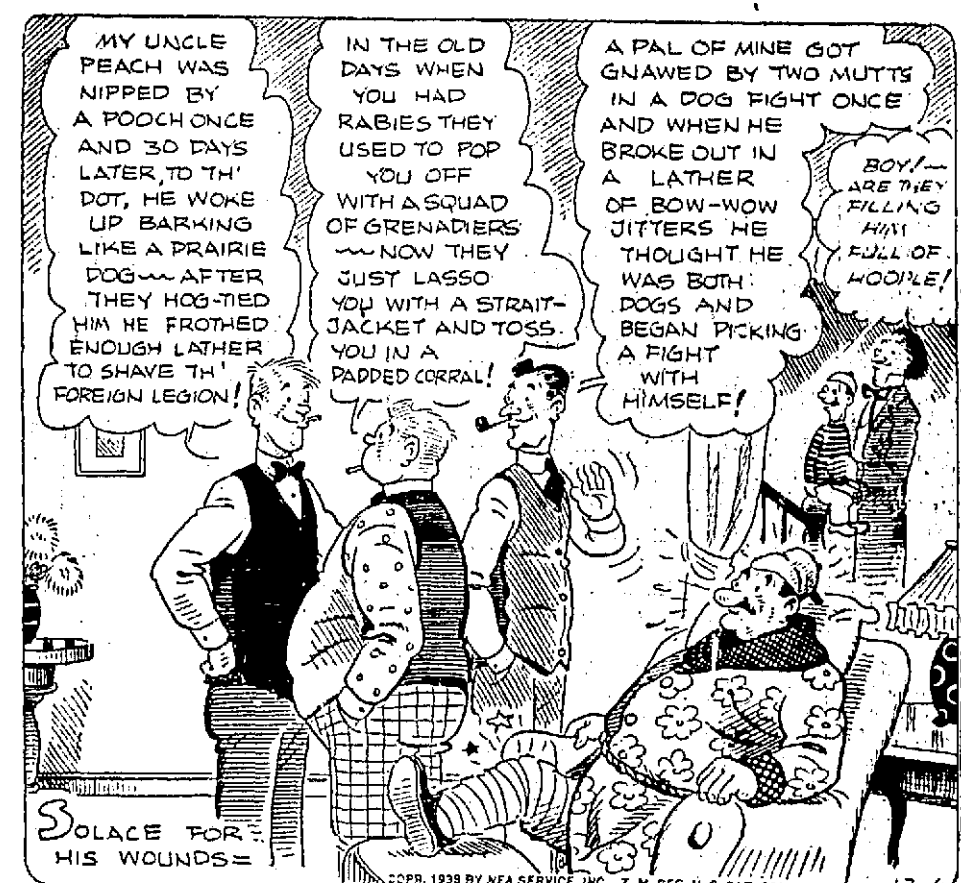

For children we know that from 300 to 400 international units each day is sufficient if the child is receiving at least 1½ pints of milk. For adults the exact amount required has not yet been definitely determined.

The problem of the aged is a special one. Elderly people are less exposed to sunlight than are younger ones. Furthermore, they may have been for sometime on diets containing insufficient milk, and certainly they do not regularly take cod liver oil and seldom go out of doors without hats, gloves and enough clothing to keep them warm. Older people are, therefore, likely to have trouble with their bones. The experts suggest that perhaps the frequency of the breaking of bones and the difficulty of healing in older people may be related to the insufficient amounts of vitamin D and calcium.

Here is a field in which there is going to be much study in the future and quite certainly to the great advantage of the public health.

SERIAL STORY SKI'S THE LIMIT

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC. BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY ALCOFF—adventurous daughter. She faced a choice between two navy authors.
DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty.
JACK HANLEY—flying author. He faced a test of a patient love.
MARVEL HASTINGS—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday, Dwight asked Judy to forgive him, to pick up the broken pieces. But she tells him she is engaged to marry Jack.

CHAPTER XXVI

THE moment the words left her lips, Judy Alcott lost the triumph that had inspired them. She felt cold, and Dwight's stunned face was not the victory she had thought it would be. It was like a flame that had dwindled quickly to ashes.

He said, "I'm sorry, Judy. Sorry I said those things. Of course I couldn't expect a girl like you to sit around and wait while I—while I came to my senses." His mouth twisted. "We all find out there is no Santa Claus. We all discover we can't undo the mistakes we made. But I wish—God, how I wish—I had seen things clearly. I wish I had married you!" The violence of his words shook him. And then he was reaching for her, pulling her into his arms. "I love you," he said over and over. "Now that I can't have you, it's too cruel to bear. I want you. I need you."

She should have pushed him away. But she had hungered for his arms so long. To be close against his heart, to feel the rise and fall of his breathing, to have his pleading in her ears like this, was so sharply sweet, that for a moment she remained quiescent, still. But then she put her hands against his chest and stirred. "Don't, Dwight. It's no use."

WHY must she deny the fire in her own blood? Why must she torture herself and him? Was it pride, exacting its toll? Pride that must be satisfied, that wouldn't let her yield to him, that wouldn't admit those sobs and those tears he had caused her?

Without her own volition, words were tumbling forth. "You were always ambitious, Dwight. You wanted to marry a rich girl, you thought it would help you get ahead. You knew that my father's influence could help you, but you weighed everything carefully and in the end it seemed to you that Marvel's money could help more. Bigger and better parties. Influence in Washington. She spoke of it! Her uncle's a banker, he has friends on the Naval Affairs Committee. You thought that would be an easier, quicker way than the road of merit. Oh, you were cold about it. You considered it from every angle!"

"That's not true!" he shouted. "Everybody knows it is true. Everybody knows that every single move you ever made, since you came into the navy, has been with the single thought of getting ahead."

"A man's a fool not to want to succeed!" "Yes, but there are ways. And ways." "I never did anything underhanded. I never used pull—" "You wouldn't have hesitated, if you had had it." "Pull is an asset. Why shouldn't a man use it if he has it?" "You're a climber, Dwight. You were always. Mother tried to tell me. Jack tried to tell me—but I was blind."

THAT hurt. He cried, "Oh, Hanley told you, did he? Just because he's a hardworking fool who's crazy about some dimwit idea that won't ever amount to a hill of beans. Six and a half million dollars for a dirigible, that goes down in any little blow."

"Battleships cost sixty millions," she said. "And dirigibles don't go down in—" "What do you know about it?" he cried, stung. "Only what he's told you."

She said despairingly, "We've come a long way from what we started with. I didn't mean to—say what I did. Whether it's true or not, whether you realize it or not, doesn't matter. I'm engaged to Jack Hanley, and—"

"You're too proud to take me because I married her first," he said slowly. "That's all it is. You know so little of life, Judy! People all make mistakes. That's how we find out, in the end, what we really want. If you loved Hanley you'd have married him long before I knew you. He's been hanging around you ever since he got out of the Academy."

"Let's not talk about it any more," she thought that Dwight had none of the sensibility that Jack had. Jack was always so careful in what he said, so considerate of her feelings. But Dwight barged blindly on, saying the things he wanted to say, not caring how they hurt.

SHE turned the key in the ignition. "Shall I drop you anywhere?" she asked. "I wasn't going anywhere. I suppose I'll go back to the ship." She couldn't resist asking, "Where is Marvel?" "On Tennant's yacht, I guess. I don't care."

But that wasn't true. He did care. She said gently, "You turned to me because it was a salve for your pride, Dwight. I think you're still crazy about her." "A moment ago you accused me of marrying her for her money."

But she knew that though this was true, it did not prevent him from really loving Marvel; from being affected by her beauty and her lure. "I guess I'll get out here," he said, reaching for the door handle. "Don't. I'll drive you to the pier."

So when they stopped at the pier, and Dwight got out, she did not notice anyone she knew. Yet the moment she reached home, her mother said to her, "Judy, I've just had a phone call from Mrs. Lane. She says someone on the station saw Dwight getting out of your car a few minutes ago. She says—"

"I suppose people are talking already?" Judy mopped. "Can't I even drop him off at the pier without people leaping to the conclusion that he was making love to me?"

"Was he making love to you?" her mother asked, in a quiet voice. (To Be Continued)

Blue Devils Plan 2-Hour Workout at Jordan Stadium

PINE BLUFF—Pine Bluff football fans began plans Tuesday for the reception of the Duke University Blue Devils when they reach here the afternoon of December 21 for a two-hour workout in Jordan stadium, en route to Pasadena, Calif., for the Rose Bowl game January 2.

The fact that Pine Bluff was to be the scene of a workout was learned here when the train schedule was announced by Cotton Belt officials and later confirmed by Ted Mann, director of sports publicity for Duke University. His message said, however, that plans were tentative.

The Blue Devil special is scheduled to leave Durham, N. C., the morning of December 20. Coach Wallace Wade with 50 members of his squad will be aboard. More than 200 university officials and fans also will be on the train. The Pine Bluff stop will be the first of any duration after the train leaves Durham. The second workout is expected to be held at El Paso. Other stops will be made at Memphis, Tenn.; Dallas, Fort Worth and Abilene, Tex.

Mooney Continues Fight for Freedom

Takes Formal Steps Toward Seeking Pardon From New Governor

SAN FRANCISCO—(P)—Thomas J. Mooney's 21-year court fight for freedom reached a dead end Monday before the United States' highest tribunal and he promptly took the first formal step toward seeking a pardon from Governor-Elect Culbert L. Olson.

Confidence that the pardon would be granted was expressed by Attorney George T. Davis, who described the courts' failure to act as "the great tragedy of the Mooney case."

Davis formally notified Matthew Brady, district attorney, of Mooney's intention to seek a pardon from his conviction as San Francisco's 1916 Preparedness Day bomber. This notification, and acknowledgment by the district attorney, are legal prerequisites to the pardon application which Davis expects to file January 3, immediately after Olson's inauguration as governor.

country would not be endangered by dust-laden air."

Covering a zone roughly 100 miles wide, the shelterbelt runs through the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. It covers 885 miles in North Dakota, 863 in South Dakota, 1410 in Nebraska, 1201 in Kansas, 1533 in Oklahoma and 1667 in Texas. It serves from 1657 farms in North Dakota to 2766 in Oklahoma. More than 5,000,000 trees were planted the first year, more than 40,000,000 in 1938.

In North Dakota the shelterbelt is centered in the greatest spring-wheat producing area of the United States; in South Dakota and Nebraska in the corn belt; in Kansas in the wheat belt; in Oklahoma and Texas in the cotton territory. Every 8 1/2 acres of these trees will give protection to the average 160-acre farm. Eventually the government visualizes a shelterbelt network covering the entire great plains region.

When last heard from, this country population center was at a spot 2.9 miles northeast of Linton, Greene County, Indiana.

Blinding Fog Over Atlantic Sea Coast

Ships, Airplanes Stalled and Highway Traffic Is Hampered

By the Associated Press

A blinding fog hung over the eastern seaboard from Halifax to Atlanta Monday, stalling ships and airplanes hampering highway traffic and causing several serious crashes on wet or ice-glazed roads.

Three fatal automobile accidents occurred in the Philadelphia area, where 22 also were hurt in the crash of a skidding New York-Miami bus. One person was injured fatally in a pile-up of six automobiles and three trucks near Boston. Eight were hurt in another crash near Worcester, Mass.

Near nightfall, the haze began lifting in Boston harbor and the Cape Cod canal, allowing fog-bound ships to creep into port. No ships had moved into New York harbor since noon. The steamer City of Los Angeles delayed docking until Monday.

New York-Boston buses ran late and airplanes were grounded as far south as Washington early Monday night. Flying below what point was reported normal.

At Halifax, N. S., visibility dropped to less than 10 feet at times. Ice coated roads in Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire, but the thermometer in Rochester, N. Y., broke a 22-year-old record for December when it hit a high of 59.

Cooperative societies in Fukien province are working to obtain agricultural credits, cooperative production and marketing, and cooperative purchases by consumers.

'Divine Healing' Mother Convicted In Death of Son

Mrs. Lillian Volstad, who relied on "divine cure," was convicted of manslaughter by a Los Angeles judge because she refused medical care for her young son Francis before his death.

Francis, age 9, was not removed to a hospital until a court order was obtained. By that time the boy's appendix had burst. The mother refused to ride with him to the hospital.

Acquitted, but verbally lashed by the judge, was the Rev. Wilbur Alvis, who urged the mother to rely on "divine healing" and played a guitar at the boy's bedside.

Communism, and relieves us of our freedom of operation.

I will hereby suggest that if a mere principle is to deprive us of our daily bread, we pay an enormous price for what he construes freedom.

What the people want today is results, not principles. It sometimes becomes necessary in case of emergency to adopt methods that seem communistic, and to continue them until the emergency is removed. He says the AAA was overruled by the Supreme Court as unconstitutional, and says Roosevelt and Wallace as though they had committed an unpardonable crime by criticizing it. In the first place it was overruled by a bias-minded bunch of judges who regarded anything that sounded like recovery as too Democratic; and in the second place, it is my opinion that these judges should not only be subject to criticism but in case they become an impediment to national progress they should be impeached and removed from office, as our state officers are removed.

The case in question is a fair example. Who is responsible for our present predicaments?

The answer echoes: The Supreme Court.

We were well on our way to recovery with 12 cent cotton and debts being rapidly eliminated when the Supreme Court pulled the bridge off by killing the AAA, thus piling up 1 million bales of cotton in 1937 on top of the already heavy surplus.

These judges are only human, and carry only the power that is vested in them by their government.

No, Mr. Johnson, we were not told that foreign governments would not buy our cotton, we were only urged to produce enough for domestic consumption, and reduce our supply for foreign consumption to the proportion of foreign demand. We can depend on a very limited demand for foreign consumption for years to come, unless we can produce it for three cents. Foreign countries under a poorer standard of living can and will not America.

Mr. Johnson asks how we can be relieved in a program of reduction in order to receive plenty? I would counter by asking how we can raise cotton we can neither eat or sell. Our local buyers have cotton on hand they can not sell at any price; it is doubtful if another bumper crop would sell for the cost of ginning. The speculator will not invest in a product they cannot sell. The AAA is not a cure all, it is merely an antidote to assist in poisoning the output that is devouring the economic life of our nation.

So now, Brother Farmer when we go to the polls Saturday, remember we are voting for a bill that was tried and found good, and that we are drifting out to sea during a tempest, and that the administration is extending to us a life line, and that the watch word is Save Your Selves lest we all perish.

ed a cabin at a tourist camp and renewed the contact with Sheffield. The latter arranged a meeting for them with Akers at the Sheffield filling station.

Haynes related that he and Norris drove down the road a short distance from the filling station in Akers' car and that during the ride they discussed with him the possibility of robbing the Oaklawn race track.

"What was his response?" asked United States Attorney Fred A. Isgrig. "He told us there were several things to know about it before it could be robbed and that he would let us know about it later," Haynes replied. "He said he would find out how much money was to be carried, when it was to be carried and other things."

"He did discuss the question of securing more men?"
"I suppose so."
"Did you talk about other robberies?"

"Yes."
Witness Says "Tips" Furnished by Akers

The witness testified that subsequently Hairston and Lamb joined them in Hot Springs and that the four of them often saw Akers on Malvern road, in town and at the races.

"How would you arrange to meet him?" the district attorney asked.

"We would call his office and make the arrangements," Haynes replied. "What was the form you used in arranging the meeting?"

"We would tell him Dr. Brown was speaking and tell him something was lost."

"How would you meet him?"

"He would pass us and we would trail him out to where he stopped."

"Did he ever notify you whether there was a pickup notice of any of you?"

"Yes, he had a card on Norris."

"What did he do with it?"

"He turned it over to Norris."

"Was there anything with the notice?"

"Yes, there was a letter from the Dallas (Texas) police."

"What was done with the letter?"

"It was destroyed."

After questioning Haynes about the various movements of members of the Lamb gang about Hot Springs, Mr. Isgrig inquired:

"Did all of you go freely about Hot Springs?"

"Yes."

"Why did you stay in Hot Springs?"
